JAPANESE

JAPA 101, 102 Introduction to Japanese (3, 3 sem. hrs.)

An introduction to modern Japanese language and culture for students with no knowledge of Japanese. Basic listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills are taught, along with cultural components. Includes instruction on using computer software to produce Japanese scripts on an English keyboard.

NB: Native Japanese speakers or students who have studied Japanese at this level may not take this course for credit. Higher levels may be offered by directed study. For more information, contact the instructor.

Prerequisite(s): None for 101; JAPA 101 is a prerequisite to 102. (3-1; 3-1).

LATIN

LATIN 211, 212 Medieval Ecclesiastical Latin RP (3, 3 sem. hrs.)

An introduction to Latin grammar and the basic vocabulary of medieval ecclesiastical Latin. The one- or two-semester program of study is designed to prepare the student for independent reading in Jerome's Latin Vulgate, the Summa Theologiae of Thomas Aquinas, and other medieval texts of moderate difficulty.

NB: Course taught at Redeemer Pacific College, an approved TWU learning centre.

Prerequisite(s): None, but completion of 211 normally required for 212. (3-0; 3-0)

LEADERSHIP

LDRS 300 Leadership Theory and Practice (3 sem. hrs.)

This course is designed for students who wish to advance their understanding of leadership and enhance their personal leadership skills, attitudes, and behaviours in keeping with the mission of TWU. It introduces students to the literature of leadership, helps them design tools for assessing their own leadership abilities, and enables them to develop a Christian servanthood leadership model within the context of a Christian worldview. Team building and self-assessment exercises, leadership presentations, case studies, and field research are included.

Prerequisite(s): Second year standing or above. (0-0; 3-0)

LDRS 301 Lifelong Learning Strategies in Leadership (2 sem. hrs.)

Developing good leadership skills is a lifelong pursuit requiring continuous learning. This required introductory course is designed to provide the adult learner with an introduction to both learning and leading that ensures academic and personal learning success for a lifetime of leadership development and application. Foundational to leadership concepts is

- a) a thorough understanding of self, and;
 - b) an understanding of what leadership refers to: the definition, the differences between leadership and good leadership, what it means to distinguish leadership from management, why leadership is necessary in organizations, and;
 - c) the role and importance of learning within an organization. The course includes assessment tools to assist the students in understanding themselves, and measures their progress in leadership comprehension and application.
- Prerequisite(s): None.

LDRS 302 Historical Concepts and Theories in Leadership (3 sem. hrs.)

This course is an introduction to historical organizational concepts and theories that have influenced current leadership and management trends. The course highlights early societal and philosophical influences that led to the development and implementation of classical management theories and subsequent emerging theories through the 1980s. Students examine influences on current marketplace applications in interpreting actions and prerequisites of individuals and organizations.

Prerequisite: Third year standing or permission of instructor.

LDRS 303 Contemporary and Popular Approaches in Leadership (3 sem. hrs.)

This course provides an overview of contemporary and popular approaches that have influenced current movements in leadership and management trends from the 1990s to present day. Students are exposed to a variety of contemporary leadership approaches that focus on psychodynamics, individual and organizational values, ethical relational orientations, emotional intelligence, and other aspects that have helped define current interpretations of leadership. Because understanding oneself is the foundation of contemporary leadership, experiential learning techniques are used to expose students to concepts that assist them in building a knowledge bank of contemporary approaches and practical tools for leadership and management application.

Prerequisite: Third year standing or permission of instructor.

LDRS 310 The Learning Organization (3 sem. hrs.)

In the knowledge age, leaders must influence the nature, direction, and quality of organizational knowledge and competence. This course exposes students to the importance of expanding people's ability to understand and cope with the challenges organizational situations generate. Organizational theory is defined and analyzed. Practical methods of managing knowledge assets and facilitating learning are discussed as students grapple with how to integrate all aspects of organizational presence into a comprehensive and iterative learning organization. Prerequisite: Third year standing or permission of instructor.

LDRS 320 Ethical Decision Making (3 sem. hrs.)

The course explores ethical decision-making in a business environment. It examines individual, organizational, and macro-level issues in ethics. The course does not determine correct ethical action; it is designed to promote the understanding of the role of values and ethics as leaders formulate strategies for motivating, communicating, utilizing power, and developing followers.

Prerequisite: Third year standing or permission of instructor.

LDRS 400 Interpersonal Leadership: Negotiation and Conflict Resolution (3 sem. hrs.)

Students learn to identify conflict sources within and outside organizations related to personal differences, real and imagined levels of power, and stakeholder interests. Forms of dispute resolution are discussed including professional arbitration and alternative methods of mediation, with a recognition that conflicts can be beneficial.

Prerequisite: Third year standing or permission of instructor.
