2 TIMOTHY 3:17

Having hit the airwaves in 1961, Ray Charles, the musical prodigy and pioneer, popularized a song whose chorus is catchy and pithy in its declaration: "Hit the road, Jack / And don't you come back / No more, no more, no more, no more." Last year was no doubt taxing, a reoccurring punch to the solar plexus, predominately because of the pandemic that remains. Time has felt paused, truncated, and even stolen in a sense. Constantly adapting in response to COVID-19 vaccines, boosters, variants, and related safety measures has not been easy. Families and communities, financial systems, wedding plans, and much more seems to have reached an exhaustive tipping point. Millions of people have died. In November, a mentor who knew me since I was an undergraduate student, passed away at the age of 85. I haven't seen my little nephews, who are now not so little anymore, and other family members in close to six years. If we are to be good neighbors, global citizens, and disciples of Jesus, we must accept a new normal while being honest about the anguish that accompanies the adjustment. With the New Year officially underway, perhaps you are happy that 2021 has hit the road. I know I am.

Life is short, and a precious gift, so in this fresh voyage into another 365 days, may 'adults who behave like toddlers with long legs,' those attracted to insurrection, absurdity, and insolence, no longer occupy the center stage. We are on borrowed, blood-bought time and there is vital, godly work to do that requires additional personnel. (Matthew 9:35-38) In Means of Grace: A Year of Weekly Devotions, Fleming Rutledge writes that, "The line between good and evil runs through each person," and she is right. Within each of us is the capacity to maim or heal, to be a caregiver, lifelong learner, and compassionate ambassador for God or to be something less. As I hope you do as well, I look forward to sacrificing comfort and convenience to advance the kingdom of God, promoting peace and prosperity during hardship. (Jeremiah 29:7)

But, dear friends, remember what the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ foretold. They said to you, "In the last times there will be scoffers who will follow their own ungodly desires." These are the people who divide you, who follow mere natural instincts and do not have the Spirit.

Jude 1:17-19
